SUMMARY:

Dr. Lorne King Rosenfield is a board-certified plastic surgeon in private practice in Burlingame, California, since 1987.

- He is a Board Member of the ASAPS and ASJ and an active Clinical Professor of Plastic Surgery at three institutions: The University of California, San Francisco, Stanford, and Duke Universities. Dr. Rosenfield has lectured widely nationally and internationally on a wide range of aesthetic surgery topics. He has published extensively, contributing innovative strategies in both facial rejuvenation and body contouring, describing procedures that are at once maximally effective and safe.

- Dr. Rosenfield's passion for "aesthetically safer" surgery led to his Pinch Blepharoplasty and Rhytidoplasty techniques, universally adopted by his colleagues. He also has written original work on the subject of safety, and his Perioperative Surgical Checklist has become the standard for both the American Society of Aesthetic Surgery and within the European Union.

- He has also been a pioneer as the first plastic surgeon to prove the value of surgical video for both augmented teaching and self-evaluation, originally harnessing Google Glass and now a headlight-mounted iPhone.

- Dr. Rosenfield created and recently just launched a start-up innovative aesthetic surgery conference called The INDIE Aesthetic Surgery Roundtable Summit (<http://www.INDIEmeeting.com>) in collaboration with Duke University. The express mission of this unique meeting is to promote demystified, unadulterated, practical teaching for the surgeon to enjoy consistent and safe outcomes.

- He is presently working on two books, What Would Hippocrates Do?, which will explore the philosophical origins of Medicine and how these same tenets could better inform our delivery of health care today, and The Surgical Learning Curve, which will elucidate his novel approach to both the learning and teaching of aesthetic surgery through the exposure of one's "learning curve" including those of the world's masters of aesthetic surgery.

- Dr. Rosenfield is the Founder and Director of the Peninsula Plastic Surgery Foundation, which delivers charity reconstructive surgery to the uninsured within his community, and a former Chairman of the Board of Operation Access, a non-profit organization that coordinates this charitable reconstructive care.

- He has four children and one original wife.

PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITY:

UCSF/Stanford/Duke: He has been active in aesthetic surgical education as a Professor at UCSF and Stanford for over 15 years and, most recently, Duke University.

ASAPS: Dr. Rosenfield is a Board member of the American Society of Aesthetic Surgery. He is a former ASAPS Visiting Lecturer Professor and Chair of both the Safety and Course Committees.

ABPS: Dr. Rosenfield is both a Senior Examiner and an elected Committee Member of the cosmetic surgery subcommittee at the American Board of Plastic Surgery (ABPS).

ASJ: Dr. Rosenfield serves as Board member and Section Editor of the Aesthetic Surgery Journal (ASJ), the most prestigious in its class.

AAAASF: He is a long-standing Inspector for the American Association for Accreditation of Ambulatory Surgery Facilities.

ISAPS: He is a former Traveling Lecturer Professor for the International Society of Aesthetic Surgery and presently a member of the patient safety committee

MBC: He is a former Expert Consultant for the Medical Board of California.
